

Sal Parco

Sal Parco owns and operates seven restaurants in the Charleston area, each offering diners a variety of choices and each as successful as the last. From the original Mustard Seed sprung forth the wildly successful Boulevard Diner, a handful of other Mustard Seed locations and Sette, his Italian restaurant near Shem Creek. It's not the most sophisticated or expensive food in town, but each of his restaurants offer wholesome, inventive, satisfying meals at reasonable prices, a fact that has made each eatery in his empire a regular choice of locals.
